Baker says he went through the air like lightning for about a quarter of a mile. The cyclone came within twenty feet of James K. Marbourg's house, but did it no injury. His corn crib and out houses were demolished, the wind passing between the house and barn, scarcely touching the latter.

There was very little hall in Washington, but specimens were exhibited here which were brought from beyond Keola or two, over which the whirl wind seems to have jumped, is desolate looking. Scarcely a house, barn, shed or granary is left. All were swept a way as clean as the fire wheel out the north side of Chicago. The exact starting point of the storm is not known but it is believed to have been in Keokuk county, probably a lew miles west of Lancaster, which town it is said was totally demolished. It advanced in a northerly direction, passing north of Tallyrand about three miles, and south of Keola, through the German setwhich were brought from beyond Keols ath of Keola, through the German setand near Lancaster. One piece weighed seven ounces and was nine inches in circumference. Several pieces still longer than this are said to have been picked up. Among the marvelous stories related is one that a flock of sheep, 150 in number, were grazing in a field when the cyclone converged. Institutively the poor anisouth of Keola, through the German Set-tlement called Baden, approaching the line of Washington county where it jump-ed a district of about eight miles alight-ing again about six miles northwest of Washington on the farm of Frank Brown. Remaining on the ground approached. Instinctively the poor sui-mals huddled closely together as if for mutual protection. The storm swept six or eight miles, it passed up to lor six or eight miles, it passed up to Highland township. Leaving the earth here, it struck again in Middle township, where its force was spent, and it disap-peared as suddenly as it appeared. Those who saw the commencement say they first noticed an immense black mass, which to some resembled a huge hay-stack in shape, and to others a small bal-beau with the small end towards the mutual protection. The storm swept down upon them and bore them into the air, where, as an eye witness says, they looked like a flock of immense birds whiri-ing around and around. They were thus swept along for a distance of half a mile, when they struck with all but forty of them proceeded and tore into fragments. them mangled and tore into fragments oon with the small end towards the and scattered along the path of the storm. ound. They could not see beyond its ders, but as it went by they saw mud by the state of the same and the same and boards flying in all directions. Houses were torn from their foundations as if they were chaff, broken and twisted into a million fragments, some of which were forced into the ground two or three feet. Cattle were litted up, carried some distance and hurled headlong to the earth. One heifer three years old what thrown into a ditch head first, and when found her head and neck were buried in the mud. It is impossible to give an adequate description of the progress of the cyclone it moved forward so rapidly, and those who saw it approaching were so badly frightened that they thought only of their safety. What met their view they could not avoid looking the loss of life is keoken county, but it is known that five persons, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Edledinger and child, a child of Peter March, and a child of Michael Tuck, were killed, and ten other adults and children injured. A reporter of the Tribune took a ride over the route of the harricane this morning, and was astonished at the ruin wrought in an hour or two. The first farm visited was that of John E. Cunningham, which is about seven miles northeast of Washington. Neither the barn or house was visible; they had been torn to pieces, and only a few fragments remained, nearly all the timber having been blown away. Pieces of boards were sticking out of fields, some of them imbedded in the ground two feet, and so tightly that they could not be pulled out. Dead stock was visible everywhere—horses, cows, pigs and chickens. Here and there were pigs impated to the ground, while frequently chickens were encountered without feathers on them. MEMPHIS, May 24.—For a week past detectives have been at work to discover the whereabouts of Adrian Bartlett, a carriage maker, who had suddenly disappeared. During his residence here he had borne an unblemished character, and was engaged to a respectable young lady. No cause could be assigned for his disappearance. The detectives could find no clue until last evening, when his body was found under a bluff near Fort Pickering, with a pistol by his side, and every evidence pointed to the fact that he had committed suicide. In his pocket was found a card issued by Huron Lodge I.O. O.F., of Goderich, Ontario, to Alexander Bayne, for Carlists.
